

THE IMMANUEL DOVE

Discovering and displaying Christ in here and out there

Immanuel Presbyterian Church (USA) Tucson, AZ Volume 31 Issue 5

This Holy Week, culminating on Easter Sunday, I felt something pressed upon my heart: we are a resurrection people and rising people because the crucified Christ is our resurrected Lord and a rising Lord. Christ is in us and we are in Christ. Yet, too often in my life I embrace the status quo or accept personal defeat or acquiesce to the societal trends away from active involvement in a faith community. My natural default more often than not is to wring my hands or fold my hands, rather than fold my hands in prayer or place my bets on what God can do. Something, or should I say Someone, in my spirit is nudging and prompting me to exclaim a hope-filled and compassionately defiant, “Hell No! And an even more resounding, “Heaven Yes!”

I’ve got a confession to make. As I advance in years, I’m becoming more of a softie. And I kind of like it. I tear up more these days as I see you—Immanuel in action. Your faith and devotion inspire me. Rousing anthems and offertory pieces have been stirring something inside of me. Seeing your service in action, whether it be making improvements to our campus, coordinating volunteers to prepare food, crafting prayer stations, designing websites, sewing for others, preparing Sunday School lessons, mentoring young people, your heartfelt prayers, creating flyers, implementing software changes, counting donations, visiting the sick, cooking meals, bringing food to the sanctuary, studying God’s Word, setting up for events...I could keep going, this is just the short list. Of course, none of us are perfect, but God is smiling on us. 9252 E. 22nd Street is a little colony of heaven and a beacon of hope.

All this is just too good for just us. As of late, I’ve been scratching my spirit and my head in divine discontent: how can we get out the good news and broadcast God’s love and hope to even more people than we already do? We’re making exciting steps of faith for diversified growth—with our new website and increased social media presence. The introvert in me needs to be stretched to utilize these tools more for the good news, and that’s one of my resurrection resolutions for the second half of 2019. The greatest influence we have is by word of mouth and word of action to share and show the good news of Christ within our circle of influence (8 to 12 people) and the strangers we come across.

Immanuel, would you join with me in praying for open doors to walk through in faith? To pray for God’s will to be done and then follow Christ to those in need, extending friendly invitations of hospitality to neighbor and stranger alike? Holy Spirit, continue to open us, stretch us, empower us, nudge us, nay prod us, to shine brighter and be an even greater blessing to more and more people here and now. Let’s step out of our comfort zones and step up our engagement in holy brainstorming on how God might use us in deeper and farther ways to touch and be touched by more lives in Christ’s name. We are a resurrection and a rising people, Immanuel!

Grace and Peace,

John

NEW LIFE CHALLENGES

News in the Missions World

Standing Alongside

Rev. Dr. Karla Ann Koll, a mission co-worker of PCUSA reported this spring:

Every morning when I wake up here in San Jose, Costa Rica, I wonder what the day will hold. A trip to the hospital? A call from a family in need of food? Over and over in recent months, I have been reminded that being a mission co-worker of the Presbyterian Church USA means standing alongside those in need. Accompanying vulnerable people means entering into their vulnerability and experiencing the unpredictability of life for those who have fled to a new country in search of refuge.

Rev. Dr. Karla Ann Koll and her husband Francisco Bermudez

Since the protests that erupted in Nicaragua in mid-April were met with violence from police and para-military groups, more than 30,000 Nicaraguans have sought refuge in Costa Rica. Some of those refugees have fallen victim to human traffickers who take advantage of their desperation. Though I have been in Costa Rica for just a few years, I have served in mission on behalf of the PCUSA in Central America for most of the last 30 years, including eight years in Nicaragua. These deep ties in the region have made my home a point of reference and a safe space for some Nicaraguan refugees. Mission as presence becomes possible when there are long-standing ties and webs of relationships built in trust over many years. We are all called to serve in Christ's mission wherever we happen to be.

Blessings,
Bob Seel

TRIENNium 2019

JULY 16-20, 2019 PURDUE UNIVERSITY

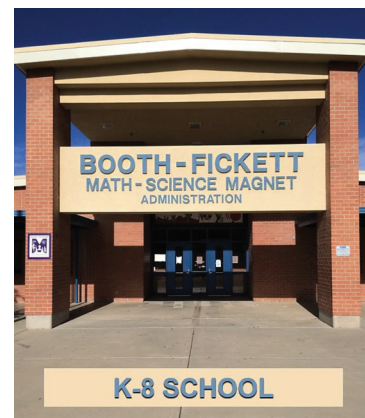

Thank you! Abby Tittle and Bridget Mitchell are on their way to Triennium this July! Thank you for your generous financial gifts to make this trip happen. Abby and Bridget will give an update to the congregation about their adventure later this summer.

Has anyone ever said that you were an answer to prayer? Me neither, until recently. I was playing bridge at Sages a couple of months ago and was telling my partner about our church's local mission project. For a several years now we have collected school supplies in August, presenting them to the staff with a "welcome back breakfast."

Last year, we made a formal commitment to Booth-Fickett Magnet School through the Haven Totes program. And last Fall, we learned that Booth-Fickett, formerly a top magnet school in TUSD, has become a failing school for a multitude of reasons. TUSD has recognized the problems and is stepping up to try to restore the school to its former status. Our Mission Team wanted to do something to help the Principal support the teachers and staff at the school.

Cheryl Wood and I talked with the Principal and the Community Liaison to see where we could help. A few projects were offered, but the Principal emphasized how nice it would be to renovate the teacher's lounge. It has been 15 years since anything has been done to that room! We presented the idea to the Mission Team, and the team voted to take on the project.

Old Sink, Counter and Cabinets - Before

But, back to Sages: when I told this story, my partner looked at me kind of funny and said. "You are an answer to prayer!" (Now that makes you feel funny). I asked why, and he said he and a group of people had been meeting for prayer at Booth-Fickett for a year, praying that something would happen to help the morale at the school. He felt our mission project was a direct answer to their prayers. Wow!

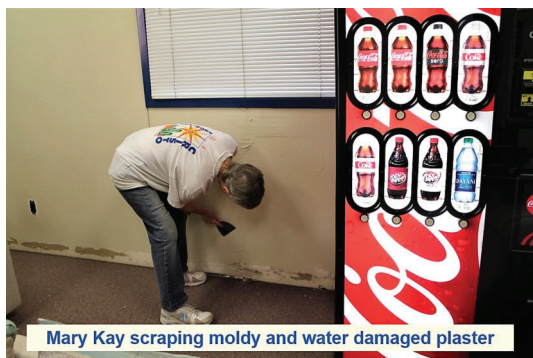

We moved into the project with a leap of faith. Faith that the project will help morale, and faith that we find the funding. At this writing, a team of volunteers has painted the room; cleaned and painted the badly worn cabinets, adding new hardware; replaced the countertop by the sink; and added a tile back splash. It looks fantastic!

Cheryl, Mary Kay, & Shirley - Getting Started

Make Sure you Cut the Hole Right, Gary

The finishing phase is a little more expensive, as we lay new flooring. We have a TUSD-approved dealer who offered a very competitive price on the flooring ($3900). We will install two new work tables with electrical outlets for teachers to charge their devices (currently, they have one extension cord that snakes out from behind a filthy, dirty couch).

We bought a new (used) clean couch, and a rattan cabinet for the microware from a garage sale. We are looking for a couple of nice matching chairs and a coffee table from used furniture stores, as well as two small cabinets to be used in the teacher bathrooms.

The project will be finished after school is out. Next fall when the teachers return to school, we will present this to them with an Open House and refreshments.

Mission encompasses many different life circumstances. This project is a completely new and different focus from what we have been supporting. If this local mission speaks to you as it did to us, we would be thrilled to accept any donation you would like to make. Checks can be made out to IPC with Booth-Fickett Project in the bottom corner.

Music and The Word: What Is It and How Does It Happen?

On April 7, Immanuel's Sanctuary Choir continued a tradition of nearly 50 years when they presented the Music and The Word service called "Glimpses: Stories of Wonder and Grace." The choir was joined by a string orchestra of 7 violins, 2 violas, 2 cellos, and a double bass. Piano, organ, timpani, and percussion completed the ensemble.

"Glimpses" highlighted moments of God's presence revealed throughout history as well as some from Jesus' ministry on Earth. Pastor John read the Scripture selections on which each glimpse was based, and then offered reflections on what the Scripture meant at the time it was written and what it means to us today as people of God. The choir's five anthems, the instrumental prelude and offertory, and the congregational hymns also were expressions of those Scripture readings.

The service opened with the popular Andre Crouch song My Tribute (also known as To God Be the Glory) and closed with the hymn Go, My Children, With My Blessing (think All Through the Night for the tune) accompanied solely by the lush sound of the strings. In between, the choir sang the Spiritual In That Great Gettin'-Up Mornin', a cynical but jazzy Somebody Spoiled It Again, Billy's newest anthem, Jesus, Shepherd, which asked the question of Jesus "Why would you choose to do this?" and the majestic The Heavens Are Telling from The Creation by Haydn.

Music and The Word was the 1970s brain-child of Billy Schurr and Rev. Bill Harvey when they served together on staff at Woods Memorial Presbyterian Church in Severna Park, MD. Their goal was to examine selected Scripture that was based on a topic or theme, and to sing music in different styles that would appeal to many people. We asked Billy, "Why all the different styles of music?" He explained, "Because different people like different styles, and everyone isn't necessarily moved by the same kind of music. When you sing a cantata, for example, you get 20-30 minutes of music in the same style. We wanted the service to appeal to more people than a cantata might."

Music and The Word service at Woods Church, October 1977

Woods Choir presents a service of Music and The Word for the dedication of the new sanctuary at Prince of Peace Presbyterian Church in Crofton, Maryland, November 30, 1975

Since that time, Billy has written music for 117 Music and The Word services, 26 of which have been at Immanuel. At Woods Church, services of Music and The Word became such a popular genre that most of the time they were sung to a "standing room only" full house.

Even the Christmas Eve services at Woods were in the Music and The Word format, and the second service that night started at midnight to welcome in Christmas Day.

There is a specific formula Billy uses for planning these services. Each service typically includes a “classic” (Mozart, Bach, Haydn, Mendelssohn) or a “war horse” (major popular choral work from the past couple hundred years that everyone knows and loves), or one of each; an African American Spiritual; a Gospel song or something jazzy; a new anthem by Billy, written specifically for the theme; an instrumental prelude and an instrumental offertory, which are also selected because they speak to the theme; and two or three related congregational hymns.

Today, planning for a service of Music and The Word usually begins a year prior, when Billy chooses a topic, researches Scripture, and begins writing and arranging the music (he’s already planning the music for next Christmas and the following Spring). What you may not know is that none of the music is “off the shelf” except the classic. One cannot buy the music online or at a store. Most of the choir’s anthems and all of the music that the instruments play is either composed or arranged by Billy for our choir’s particular sound and for that particular instrumental combination—and often for the skills of specific soloists or instrumentalists.

People have asked where the instrumentalists come from. Depending on the city where the church is located, they may be members of the local symphony or faculty or students of a university or conservatory. In the early days in the Baltimore-Washington area, Billy hired players from the service bands (US Naval Academy band in Annapolis and the US Air Force band in Washington), and students from The Peabody Conservatory at Johns Hopkins University.

Music and The Word takes a bit of preparation. The choir spends about 8 weeks prior to the service learning the music. The week before the service, Billy gives the Scripture readings to John and they talk about the theme, the styles of music, and the flow of the service. And then John sets to work to prepare his reflections and the other liturgical elements such as prayers. Then, on the day before the service, a 3-hour rehearsal is held with the choir and instruments.

All of this comes together in a worship service that is Scripturally-grounded, musically-varied, and highly uplifting. The comment we most frequently hear is “This was the best one yet.” The most unique thing about Music and The Word is that because the music is written just for that service, the selections we hear that day are not heard in any other church in the world. They are Immanuel’s special offering in praise of God, and it’s quite possible you’ll find that the next one will be “the best one yet.”

What's in a Webinar?

PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE ON THE Self-Development of People

Part 2 of “The Least of These,” a Web seminar on alleviating poverty led by the Presbyterian Committee on the Self-Development of People (SDOP), was held Tuesday morning, April 30. Eight Immanuel folks were present: Peggy Free, Dot Weaver, Bob Seel, Cheryl Wood, Dave Diebold, Larry Tippie, Darlys Tippie, and Carol Schurr. Several other people around the country plugged in, from Minnesota to New York, in addition to the 4-member leadership team in Louisville.

The Scriptural foundation for the series is Jesus’ teaching on “the least of these” as found in Matthew 25. The theme for Part 2 was “Righteousness and Its Interconnectedness to Justice”—that is, examining how justice, righteousness, and poverty relate to each other.

Questions posed to participants included, “Why is it important to see Jesus in “the least of these?” “How do you live out this portion of Matthew 25 in your context?” “How do you think the church should live out Matthew 25?”

What does it mean to be “righteous?” One leader, Sara Lisherness, Director of Compassion, Peace & Justice, recommended 5 ways to better align ourselves with righteousness:

Sara Lisherness

- Stay alert and look for situations in which we can be agents of healing and hope.
- Resist our tendency to judge other members of our human family.
- Hold ourselves accountable to how we benefit from systems that keep people poor.
- Remember our call to the public square (John Calvin) – to work for the reform of all systems that oppress people.
- To be agents of hope and hopefulness.

Rev. Denise Anderson

Rev. Denise Anderson (former co-moderator of the General Assembly) spoke from the perspective of social ethics, reminding us that race is a construct of economics; that the purpose of race is only to “monetize” human beings (to rank them by their monetary value in society); and that historically, the US has created an economic system that criminalizes black and brown people. She pointed out that Matthew 25 talks about physical needs—hunger, thirst, nakedness, illness —and that in Matthew 25, Jesus doesn’t recommend that we meet the physical needs of others with “thoughts and prayers,” but with material goods—that we feed them, give them water, clothe them, visit them.

Rev. Anderson had recently spent time with the Poor People’s Campaign and Rev. Dr. Liz Theoharis. She mentioned that Dr. Theoharis looks to Matthew 26 to understand better how we should care for the economically vulnerable, that when Jesus said, “you will always have the poor,” he was not reassuring us that there’s nothing more we can do to change the fact that there will always be poor people, but that he may have been implying that when we abdicate our responsibility for caring for the poor, then we will indeed always have poor people.

You are cordially invited to join us as we learn more about poverty and hunger in our communities -
